SOUTHERN URBANISM AND CO-PRODUCTION IN URBAN SPACES
PANEL DISCUSSION

CO-PRODUCTION FOR A MORE INCLUSIVE GOVERNANCE?
What did you enjoy about this conference? Any thoughts relating to the keynotes and sessions?

“The Trialog Conference provides a platform for young researchers to present their work, very much in the same way that the magazine itself provides a publishing platform for researchers, who are perhaps not widely known yet. I think it is a very important platform.”

What do you think of the conference so far?

“I think it’s really great, especially the graphical representations used. I am also glad to see the involvement of students in key roles. Perceiving students as experts in their own way was a key factor in our project platforms mentioned in our paper. It was a pity that I was unable to attend all sessions though.”

What impressions will you take away from this conference?

“Since my current research topic focuses on addressing participatory planning processes, I am no expert on co-production. So, I learned a lot during this conference. I was surprised, however, by the certain Zeitgeist permeating the conference, with many references to Sherry Arnstein’s „Ladder of Citizen Participation“ and Elinor Ostrom’s 1996 paper. I do think that we may have to consider other paradigms in the future as well.”

What did you enjoy about this conference?

I found it enriching. As a development practitioner and researcher, I was impressed by the research being grounded in the realities of the issues we face. I also appreciate the level of engagement demonstrated both during the panel discussions, the keynotes and the by the individual researchers throughout the conference.
